Foreword

The Federal criminal justice system focuses on major areas of public concern such as high level drug offenses, public fraud, weapons violations and immigration offenses. The procedures followed in processing Federal offenders also reflect current practices regarding prosecution, pretrial release, sentencing and corrections. The study of Federal case processing is critical, therefore, to understanding the operations of the Federal justice system and to evaluating the effectiveness of policies and procedures for Federal crime control.

This compendium provides data on Federal offenders from initial review by U.S. Attorneys through charging, pretrial release, prosecution, adjudication, sentencing and correctional supervision. The data, which describe transactions occurring in calendar year 1989, are compiled both nationally and, in the appendix, on the basis of individual jurisdictions. Data are derived from the Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) Federal justice statistics database which includes data obtained directly from individual operating agencies. Uniform crime categories and time frames are used in reporting the data to permit the user to trace activity across different components of the Federal system.

The 1989 Compendium is the fifth in the annual BJS series. BJS hopes that the material presented in these volumes will assist criminal justice practitioners, policymakers and researchers in the analysis of current activity and the identification of trends in the Federal criminal justice system.

Introduction

The 1989 Compendium of Federal Justice Statistics is a comprehensive Bureau of Justice Statistics report presenting an overview of Federal criminal case processing. The data in the compendium are extracted from the BJS Federal justice database, which links data describing each component of Federal processing. Data are presently included from the Executive Office for the U.S. Attorneys, the Pretrial Services Agency (PSA), the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, and the U.S. Bureau of Prisons. Future editions of the compendium will incorporate data from additional Federal agencies.

The compendium describes the progress of Federal criminal suspects through prosecution (Chapter 1), pretrial release (Chapter 2), adjudication (Chapter 3), sentencing (Chapter 4), and corrections (Chapter 5). Tables follow the text of each chapter.

Both individual and corporate cases are included in the tables, and both felonies and misdemeanors, unless otherwise indicated. Corporations are not represented in tables based on data collected during pretrial interviews or in tables showing offenders sentenced to incarceration.

The 1989 compendium, fifth in a series which also includes 1984, 1985, 1986, and 1988, describes each aspect of processing in relation to suspects or defendants who completed a pertinent stage of processing during calendar year 1989. For example, the tables in Chapter 1 describe suspects whose criminal matters were initiated in 1989 or those whose matters were concluded during 1989. Chapter 3 describes defendants whose cases were terminated or disposed in the Federal courts during calendar year 1989. These are not necessarily the same as the suspects whose criminal matters are tabulated in Chapter 1.

In text discussions of tables, any comments about changes between 1988 and 1989 or between 1984 and 1989 are based on comparisons with the corresponding table in the Compendium of Federal Justice Statistics for the indicated year.

In the Federal justice database, individuals and corporations are tracked from one stage of processing to the next. Files are linked on the basis of names, demographic characteristics, and key events to permit a system-wide view of the Federal justice process. Consistent with Federal statute, identifiable data in the database may not be revealed or used for any purposes other than research or statistics.

Incomplete linkages do not affect any of the tables in this publication that are derived from a single data source, since records are included in the tabulated statistics whether or not they have been linked to other records in the database. However, some tables in this compendium provide greater richness and detail by drawing on more than one data source for each case; these tables are necessarily based upon linked records only.

Organization of the compendium

Each chapter of the compendium describes a major stage in the processing of criminal suspects and defendants and combines data from all U.S. judicial districts. Geographically detailed data appear in the district tables at the end of this compendium. The contents of the compendium include:

System overview. This section provides a graphic overview of the Federal system. Figure 1 is a flow chart of Federal processing in 1989. Figure 2 describes the attrition of suspects from prosecutorial review to sentencing, incarceration, and release.

Chapter 1. This chapter describes decisions taken by Federal prosecutors in screening criminal matters and the characteristics of cases prosecuted or declined.

Chapter 2. This chapter provides information on pretrial release, detention, and defendant conduct while awaiting trial.

Chapter 3. This chapter describes actions of U.S. district courts in adjudicating guilt or innocence. Characteristics of offenses and convicted offenders are described.

Chapter 4. This chapter describes sentencing decisions and offense and offender characteristics.

Chapter 5. This chapter addresses corrections. Data describe the time served in incarceration, prisoner movements into and out of Federal prison, and the results of supervision under probation or parole.

Methodology. This section describes the procedures followed in analyzing data and developing tables.

Data notes. This section contains information relevant to the interpretation of individual tables.

Glossary. This section contains definitions for terms used in the compendium. Since many terms used in the text or tables have specialized meanings (either because they refer to Federal law or because of reporting procedures in the Federal agencies supplying the source data), readers are encouraged to check the glossary for exact definitions of tabulated data.

Note to reader

The tables in the compendium were constructed to permit valid comparisons within each table and to allow the reader to compare percentages (but not raw totals) across tables. It should be understood, however, that the total number of subjects shown in a particular table may not equal the number of subjects involved in a particular stage of processing, since some records could not be linked and some data sources did not include information on particular data elements classified in a particular table. Data notes indicate the exact universe for individual tables. Numbers cited in the text are based on exact calculations and may vary slightly from totals derived from tables.

Comparisons between selected statistics for 1989 and those for other years are presented in the BJS publication Federal Criminal Case Processing, 1980-89, which currently includes updates through part of 1990.¹ This compendium contains more complete information for 1989 than is found in Federal Criminal Case Processing, 1980-89.

The compendium presents only factual information, without analyses of trends or explanatory factors underlying the statistics. Analyses of Federal justice statistics may be found in Special Reports and other publications, some of which are cited in the compendium. Assessment of changing patterns in the compendium's tabulations may depend on detailed examination of subcategories not shown in the tabulations or may require other sources of information, such as knowledge of legislation or Federal agency procedures.

The compendium is prepared under the BJS Federal Justice Statistics program. The BJS Federal justice database, maintained under the program, is available for public use at the National Archive of Criminal Justice Data, Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research, as data collection ICPSR 9296.

Chapter 1

Prosecution

Federal criminal cases may be brought by the U.S. Attorney's Office, by the Criminal Division of the U.S. Department of Justice, or by other authorized agencies.

Most commonly, investigations are referred to the U.S. Attorney by the Criminal Division of the U.S. Department of Justice, by a Federal investigative agency (primarily the Drug Enforcement Administration; Federal Bureau of Investigation; Postal Inspection Service; Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms; or Secret Service), or by a State or local investigative agency. Investigations may also be initiated and cases brought directly by U.S. Attorneys or by the Criminal Division of the U.S. Department of Justice. This chapter reports only on suspects investigated by U.S. Attorneys.

Investigations referred to the U.S. Attorneys may be immediately declined for prosecution or pursued further. In the latter case, additional investigation may be conducted in order to determine whether the matter should be filed as a case in the Federal courts, referred to a U.S. Magistrate for disposition, or declined for prosecution. Matters that are declined may be referred to another authority for prosecution or settled through alternative resolution procedures.

Declination policies frequently limit the types of matters that will be filed as cases or stipulate the level of investigation that must be completed before a presentation can be accepted as a matter. Individual policies vary widely across Federal districts and may be influenced by a variety of factors, including Federal prosecutorial policies, regional needs, and individual U.S. Attorneys' priorities and staff resources.

For purposes of statistical calculations, only those investigations and other activities requiring over one hour's attention are classified as matters by the U.S. Attorneys.

Matters received (table 1.1)

Over 108,000 suspects were involved in matters received by the U.S. Attorneys in 1989 (table 1.1), about eight thousand higher than the previous year. Drug offenses as a group accounted for 31% of all suspects in matters received. The total number of drug suspects investigated was 15% higher in 1989 than in 1988. Drug offenses include possession, manufacturing, importing, and trafficking in narcotics, controlled substances, and marijuana, as well as any unspecified drug-related offense other than conspiracy.

Over one-fourth of the suspects (29,515) were investigated for fraudulent property offenses, which include fraud (except tax fraud), forgery, embezzlement, and counterfeiting. Of these, 20,746 persons (19% of all suspects in matters received) were investigated for frauds other than tax fraud.

Regulatory offenses accounted for 8% of all suspects in matters received; 7% of all suspects were investigated for immigration offenses; and 4% were investigated for weapons offenses.

Violent offenses accounted for 5% of all suspects. Under half of these were investigated for robbery (2% of all suspects). Three percent of the suspects were investigated for nonfraudulent property offenses, mostly larceny (2% of all suspects).

Two percent of suspects could not be classified by substantive offense because the recorded United States Code citations referred to offenses such as conspiracy and aiding and abetting.

Disposition of matters concluded (table 1.2)

Matters involving 104,248 suspects were concluded by U.S. Attorneys in calendar year 1989 (table 1.2), an increase of 10 percent since 1988.

U.S. Attorneys filed cases against 56% of the suspects, declined to prosecute 32%, and referred 13% for disposition by U.S. Magistrates. Of the 58,160 suspects in matters filed as cases for prosecution in U.S. district court, 42% (24,278 suspects) were investigated in connection with drug offenses (an increase from 36% in 1988), and 25% (14,251 suspects) with fraudulent property offenses.

Prosecution rates, by offense

Among matters concluded in 1989, U.S. Attorneys prosecuted 76% of all suspects in drug offense matters, and 78% of suspects in robbery matters (table 1.2). Sixty-nine percent of suspects in tax law violations were prosecuted, but only 49% of suspects in fraud matters other than tax fraud. Fewer than 37% of suspects in regulatory matters were prosecuted, although antitrust offenses were prosecuted at a rate approximately twice this high.

Magistrates

Some criminal cases are referred to U.S. Magistrates for processing. Most U.S. Magistrates' caseloads are primarily misdemeanors, but referral practices vary among U.S. district courts. Overall, 13% of suspects in matters concluded in 1989 were disposed by U.S. Magistrates (table 1.2). However, 65% of all immigration suspects were disposed by U.S. Magistrates. Magistrate proceedings played a significant role in the disposition of escape suspects (41%) and persons suspected of violating migratory bird laws (79%).

Basis for declination (tables 1.3 and 1.4)

A variety of factors influence the determination to decline prosecution of a case (table 1.3).

Twenty-two percent of suspects in matters declined were not prosecuted because the evidence was too weak. Nineteen percent were not prosecuted due to the lack of a prosecutable offense. The majority of these were declined either because U.S. Attorneys ascertained that no Federal law was violated (10%) or because they found no proof of criminal intent (9%).

Another 15% of all suspects in matters declined were not prosecuted for reasons variously described as minimal Federal interest (5%), resources (6%), and DOJ or U.S. Attorney policy (4%). The U.S. Attorneys' decisions not to prosecute, however, do not automatically relieve suspects of all further action: 26% of the 32,855 suspects in matters declined by U.S. Attorneys were referred for criminal prosecution elsewhere or prosecuted in other actions; 7% were subject to some noncriminal proceedings, such as pretrial diversion (4%) or civil or administrative alternative actions (3%).

Among matters declined, those involving escape, drug offenses, robbery, kidnapping, and burglary were more often referred to other authorities for prosecution than were other declined offense types (table 1.4). Combining the 2,527 drug suspects referred to other prosecution with the 25,980 drug suspects prosecuted in Federal courts or heard by U.S. Magistrates, table 1.2 shows that 89% of drug suspects in matters concluded in 1989 were either prosecuted or referred for prosecution in another jurisdiction.

Noncriminal resolutions were widely used in forgery and embezzlement matters (17% and 16%, respectively).

Processing time (table 1.5)

Processing time for matters is measured in months from the time a matter is received by the U.S. Attorney to the time of declination, filing as a case, or disposition by a U.S. Magistrate.

The average processing time for all matters concluded in 1989 was 9 months (table 1.5), about the same as in 1988. Average processing time was higher where prosecution was declined (17 months) than where a matter was filed as a case (6 months).

The average processing time for declination was also longer than for any actions by U.S. Magistrates (1 month where suspects were convicted by a U.S. Magistrate; 8 months where suspects were acquitted).

Across all offenses, average processing time for cases prosecuted in U.S. district court was longest for suspects charged with fraudulent property offenses (8 months if the matter was filed as a case; 20 months if the matter was declined). Suspects in fraudulent property crimes who were disposed by U.S. Magistrates had an average processing time of 4 months if convicted and 8 months if acquitted.

Pretrial release

The Bail Reform Act of 1984 (18 U.S.C. 3141) sets the terms for release and detention of defendants facing charges in Federal courts. At the time defendants first appear before a judicial officer, they may be (1) released on personal recognizance or unsecured bond; (2) released subject to conditions imposed by the court, possibly including traditional bail; (3) temporarily detained without bail (limited to ten working days) to permit deportation, exclusion, or revocation of previously granted conditional release; or (4) detained without bail after a hearing.¹

Federal defendants may be detained without bail if charged with specified categories of offenses and if it is determined at a special hearing that no financial or other conditions will reasonably assure the appearance of the person as required and the safety of any other person and the community. Defendants not detained under these criteria must be released, either on personal recognizance, unsecured bond, or such conditions as are necessary to assure their appearance at trial and the public safety.² The law explicitly states that the court "may not impose a financial condition that results in the pretrial detention of the person."

Release procedures

Once arrested, a defendant must be brought before a judicial officer without unnecessary delay. The judicial officer, who may be a judge but is generally a U.S. Magistrate, determines whether the defendant will be released or detained prior to trial. If a hearing is required, the release decision may be delayed no more than three days (five if the defendant requests).

Defendants may be released at any time before trial. Some defendants, therefore, are detained for some time and then eventually released before trial. This generally occurs where an appeal results in a lowering of bail conditions or the defendant requires additional time to arrange compliance with the originally set terms of release. Defendants who have been detained prior to their release are included in tabulations of both "defendants detained" and "defendants released."

Types of pretrial release

Defendants may be released without financial conditions:

Personal recognizance—defendant released subject to no financial or other conditions.

Unsecured bond—no money required to be posted before release, but defendant is liable for full bail amount if he or she fails to appear.

Conditional release—any combination of restrictions that are deemed necessary to guarantee the defendant's appearance at trial or the safety of the community. Nonfinancial conditions commonly place restrictions on the defendant's movements, associations, and/or actions. They may also involve employment, education, or treatment for medical, psychological or substance abuse conditions.

Defendants may also be released on financial conditions. Financial conditions include deposit bond (defendant required to post a percent of the total bail amount, usually 10%), surety bond (defendant released subject to guarantees by a third person that the full bail amount will be paid), or collateral bond (collateral equal to the full bail amount required to be posted by the defendant before release), possibly in combination with nonfinancial conditions.

Factors relating to release or detention

In deciding whether to release a defendant, and in setting release conditions, the court is directed to consider the nature and circumstances of the offense charged; the weight of the evidence against the defendant; the defendant's "character, physical and mental condition, family ties, employment, financial resources, length of residence in the community, community ties, past conduct, history relating to drug or alcohol abuse, criminal history, and record concerning appearance at court proceedings."³

Detention hearings may be requested in cases that involve crimes of violence, offenses for which the maximum sentence is life imprisonment or death, or serious drug offenses. Defendants with two prior convictions of such offenses are also subject to detention if charged with any felony. Detention may also be requested in cases where there is a serious risk that the defendant will flee or attempt to obstruct justice.

Rates of release and detention (table 2.1)

Fifty-five percent of all defendants scheduled for a pretrial interview in 1989 were detained with or without bail for two or more days prior to trial (the criterion for "detention" in this compendium) (table 2.1). In 1988, only 50% of defendants were detained. Eventually, 60% of the defendants were released, most commonly (43%) without financial conditions, of these, 31% were released on personal recognizance, and 69% were released on unsecured bond. Twenty-seven percent of defendants who were detained were subsequently released at some time prior to trial.

Suspects charged with offenses specifically cited in the Bail Reform Act were more likely to be detained than others. Over 72% of all alleged violent offenders were detained, including approximately 75% of those charged with murder or kidnapping, and 92% of those charged with robbery or threats against the President.

More than half of defendants in weapons cases were detained. Burglary may also be treated as a violent offense for some purposes: seventy-one percent of defendants accused of burglary were detained.

More than half of pretrial detainees were accused of drug offenses. The detention rate for defendants accused of drug trafficking was nearly four times as high as that for those accused of possession (72% and 20%, respectively).

The high detention rate for immigration offenses (76%) may be attributable to the nature of the offense: Defendants accused of immigration offenses may be detained to permit their transfer to Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) custody or to facilitate their deportation.⁴ Suspects in immigration offenses also often lack the community ties which would assure their appearance in court. Similarly, defendants charged with escape were often detained (78%).

Defendants charged with white collar offenses were unlikely to be detained while awaiting trial. Only 27% of those charged with fraudulent property offenses, 31% of those charged with regulatory offenses, and 7% of those accused of tax law violations were detained. Among released defendants charged with fraudulent property offenses, 28% were released on personal recognizance, 60% on unsecured bond, and 12% on financial conditions.

Types of detention (tables 2.1, and 2.2)

Of the 23,011 persons detained for at least two days prior to trial, 66% were held without bail, and the remaining 34% were held because they could not meet the financial conditions imposed by the court (Table 2.1). Seventy-two percent of those who were held without bail were ordered detained after a hearing to determine whether they posed a danger to the community (table 2.2). The remainder of those held without bail were temporarily detained to allow deportation, exclusion, or revocation of previously granted conditional release.

Hearings to determine dangerousness were held for 35% of all defendants scheduled for pretrial interviews in 1989 (table 2.3). Cases involving violent offenses, drug offenses, burglary, and escape were more likely than others to result in a detention hearing (56%, 51%, 49%, and 49%, respectively).

Seventy-five percent of the hearings resulted in a detention order. Alleged drug offenders made up 63% of all persons detained by this procedure. Defendants detained as a result of these hearings were held an average of 80 days while awaiting trial. Defendants who were temporarily detained or held on financial conditions averaged less than half as many days in detention (tables 2.2 and 2.6).

Men were more than twice as likely as women to be detained as a result of these hearings (table 2.3). Detention was also ordered with more than average frequency for Hispanic defendants (33%), black and other minority races (31% and 30%, respectively), the unemployed (32%) or poorly educated (30% of those who did not finish high school), and those with a history of felony conviction (39%) or drug abuse (32%).

Incidence of pretrial violations (tables 2.4 and 2.5)

Pretrial misconduct includes failure to appear at court, arrest for a new crime (either a felony or a misdemeanor), and any technical violation of the defendants' bail conditions. Overall, 11% of all defendants who completed a period of pretrial supervision in 1989 violated the terms of their pretrial release; 3% failed to appear; 3% were charged with a new offense (2% with felonies and 1% with misdemeanors); and 7% committed technical violations of their bail conditions (table 2.4).

Released defendants charged with violent crimes were more likely to commit a pretrial violation than other classes of defendants. Sixteen percent of persons charged with drug offenses or violent crimes committed at least one pretrial violation, higher than for other types of offenses. Defendants accused of fraudulent property offenses or regulatory offenses

This compendium's tabulations of characteristics related to detention are not controlled for explanatory factors such as details of the charged offense.

committed fewer violations than others (7% and 5%, respectively).

Violations were more likely for defendants released on financial conditions (15%) than for those released on personal recognizance or unsecured bond (10%) (table 2.5).

Revocation. Release was revoked for thirty-seven percent of the defendants who violated the conditions of their pretrial release. Alleged violent offenders who violated release conditions were returned to detention about half the time.

Because defendants on financial release were more likely than other released defendants to commit a violation of their release conditions, they were also more likely to have their release revoked: 5 percent of all defendants released on financial conditions were subsequently detained, in contrast to 4% of defendants released on unsecured bond or on personal recognizance (table 2.5).

Defendant characteristics (table 2.6)

Sex. More than half of male defendants were detained for at least 2 days, while approximately one third of women were so held. Men were also detained an average of 12 days longer than women (57 days vs. 45 days, respectively) (table 2.6). These figures may partially reflect the fact that male defendants more frequently commit those crimes that are likely to result in pretrial detention, such as violent offenses.

Women were more likely than men to be released on personal recognizance (20% vs. 12%, respectively) or on unsecured bond (43% vs. 27%, respectively).

Race. Thirty percent of defendants were described as either black (26%) or "other" (4%). In 1989 whites, blacks, and other minority defendants were detained at approximately the same rate (58%, 59%, and 54% respectively). White defendants were more likely than others to be released on financial conditions (17% vs. 13% of blacks and 15% of "others"). Black defendants were more likely than others to be released on unsecured bond (33% vs. 29% of whites and 23% of "others"). A quarter of defendants who were of non-black minority groups were released on their own recognizance, compared to 11% of blacks and 13% of whites.

Ethnicity. Overall, 29% of the defendants identified themselves as ethnically Hispanic.

In 1989 78% of Hispanic defendants were detained for 2 days or more before trial, compared to 45% of non-Hispanic defendants. The high rate of detention among Hispanics probably reflects the fact that 76% of defendants in immigration offenses are detained (table 2.1) and that provisions of the Bail Reform Act specifically permit the temporary detention of defendants charged with immigration offenses pending deportation or transfer to the INS.

Age. In 1989 only 7% of Federal criminal defendants were 20 years old or younger. Defendants aged 30 or under were more likely to be detained (62%) than those in their thirties (56%) or older (42%). However, the length of the detention period is generally shorter for the younger defendants.

Education. The majority of defendants had either a high school education (33%) or less (38%), while only 9% of all defendants had completed college. College graduates were detained at a lower rate than defendants with less education. While 34% of the college graduates were detained before trial, and 78% were eventually released, 66% of defendants with less than a high school education were detained before trial, and only 52% were ever released.

Marital and employment status.

In 1989, 39% of defendants were married, 20% were separated or divorced, and 33% had never been married. Married defendants were somewhat less likely to be detained (47%) than defendants who were divorced or separated (52%) or single (60%). The higher rate of release may be attributable to the perception that married defendants have more ties to the community and are therefore presumed less likely to flee than single defendants.

Employment status may also be regarded as indicative of community ties that would prevent flight. Unemployed defendants were detained at a higher rate than those who were employed at the time of their arrest (63% vs. 46%, respectively).

Prior criminal record. Records on 30% of defendants showed one or more felony convictions; 17% had at least one prior misdemeanor conviction but no felony convictions; and no criminal record was found for 53% of defendants. Defendants with prior felony convictions were most likely to be detained at least 2 days (71%) and least likely to be released on personal recognizance (8%) or unsecured bond (22%).

Drug use. In 1989, 23% of defendants admitted a history of drug abuse in their pretrial services interview. Defendants with a history of drug abuse had a higher probability of pretrial detention than other defendants (63% vs. 51%, respectively).

Chapter 3

Adjudication

Federal criminal cases may result in conviction of the defendant following either a plea or trial, acquittal of the defendant after trial, or dismissal of the case. Unless otherwise noted, data describe cases in Federal court and do not include matters disposed by U.S. Magistrates.

Defendants in cases terminated (table 3.1)

Defendants convicted. Cases were terminated against 57,671 defendants in 1989 (table 3.1), 6% higher than in 1988. Of these, 46,804 (81%) were convicted. Of those defendants who were convicted, 40,040 (86%) pleaded guilty, and another 760 (2%) pleaded nolo contendere.¹ The remaining 6,004 (13%) were convicted at trials, most of which (81%) involved juries.

A total of 10,867 defendants were not convicted. Most of these (82%) had cases against them dismissed. Another 12% were acquitted by a jury, and 6% were acquitted in trials without juries. Of the 7,960 defendants who went to trial, 75% were convicted.

Defendants charged with robbery, embezzlement, forgery, tax law violations including tax fraud, immigration offenses, food and drug, motor carrier and labor law violations were convicted at the highest rate (89% or higher). Conviction rates for the major categories of public-order offenses were below the average rate (78% for regulatory offenses, and 76% for other public-order offenses).

Trial vs. guilty pleas. Overall, 86% of all defendants convicted in 1989 pleaded guilty (table 3.1). Defendants charged with all types of fraudulent property offenses, immigration offenses, and drug possession pleaded guilty more often than average (92% or more). Defendants charged with murder or nonnegligent manslaughter, kidnapping, or racketeering and extortion pleaded guilty less often than average (67%, 59%, and 74% respectively).

Case-processing time (table 3.2)

Title I of the Speedy Trial Act of 1974, as amended, sets time requirements for processing criminal cases in Federal courts. Except for certain listed exclusions, indictment must occur within 30 days of arrest; defendants are guaranteed at least 30 days to prepare for trial; and the Government must be ready for trial within 70 days. The Speedy Trial Act does not specify a time interval from trial to sentencing, and the time limits set by the act exclude several enumerated periods of pretrial procedure such as time spent awaiting ruling on motions.² As a result, the actual processing time for most defendants can be longer than these limits without violating the provisions of the act.

Overall, defendants in cases terminated in 1989 had their cases processed in an average of 10.8 months when cases were dismissed, 7.4 months when cases went to trial, and 5.6 months when convictions were by plea (table 3.2). Drug possession and traffic offenses, which are relatively speedily settled, substantially reduced these average times. Excluding them, guilty pleas to other types of offenses required more than 6 months, trials averaged more than 8 months, and dismissals took over a year from filing to final disposition.

Regardless of the method of disposition, drug trafficking charges took longer than average time to dispose, and larceny charges were resolved faster than average. In addition, pleas and trials for defendants charged with immigration offenses were concluded with greater than average speed.

Defendants charged with embezzlement and labor law violations pleaded guilty faster than average defendants. Defendants who pleaded guilty to weapons, escape, or racketeering and extortion charges did so more slowly than average.

Charges of fraud, regulatory offenses, and racketeering and extortion that were disposed by trial took longer than the average for trials.

Violent offense charges (except those classified as "other sex offenses") resolved by dismissal were terminated faster than average, as were charges of gambling and agricultural offenses, while dismissals of escape charges took much longer than average (nearly 4 years).

Characteristics of convicted offenders (table 3.3)

Data on offender characteristics are obtained from various sources, including presentence investigations and pretrial interview records, which are available only for a subset of offenders. (See Methodology.) Some characteristics of offenders have changed since the first edition of this Compendium, covering cases terminated in 1984. The number of older offenders (over 40) increased from 25% in 1984 to 29% in 1989, with particularly large increases among those convicted of violent or fraudulent property offenses.

An increasing proportion of drug offenders were Hispanic (from 19% of all drug offenders in 1984 to 28% in 1989.) Over the same period of time, convicted drug offenders represented gradually lower educational levels. In 1984, 58% had completed high school, but by 1989 only 40% of convicted drug offenders were high school graduates. Only 6% held college degrees.

Sex. Across all offense categories, 83% of all offenders convicted in 1989 were male. The proportion of male offenders varied, however, by offense type: 94% of offenders convicted of violent offenses, 89% of those convicted of non-regulatory public-order offenses, and 87% of those convicted of drug offenses were men.

Race. Overall, 71% of convicted offenders were described as white, 26% as black, and 3% as other, such as American Indian, Alaskan Native, Asian or Pacific Islander. Although the majority of convicted defendants were white, the percent varied by offense category: regulatory offenses, 84%; other public-order offenses, 78%; non-fraudulent property crimes, 61%; and violent offenses, 59%. Although nonblack minority offenders were only 3% of convicted offenders, they represented 11% of offenders convicted of a violent crime.

Age. Forty percent of convicted offenders were under 31 years of age. Thirty-one percent of offenders were 31-40 years of age, and 29% were over 40.

Offenders convicted of public-order offenses were substantially older than other offenders; 40% of regulatory offenders and 37% of other public-order offenders were over 40. Offenders convicted of violent offenses were disproportionately young; 49% of them were 30 or younger, and 8% were under 21.

Education. Half of all convicted offenders had less than a high school education. Another 14% had completed high school, 25% had some college, and 11% were college graduates.

Convicted drug offenders were less educated than other categories of offenders. Offenders convicted of fraudulent or regulatory crimes were more than twice as likely to have finished college (19% and 20% respectively) as other property offenders (8%).

Marital status. Overall, 41% of convicted offenders were married, 29% had never married, 21% were divorced, and 7% had common law marriages. Offenders convicted of violent offenses departed substantially from this pattern; 43% of them had never married, and only 22% were married. Over half (55%) of violent offenders who had ever married were divorced, compared with one-third of ever-married nonviolent offenders.

Employment. Overall, 40% of convicted offenders were unemployed at the time of arrest. An even higher percent of offenders convicted of violent crimes (66%) were unemployed at the time of arrest. The highest employment rate was found among offenders convicted of regulatory offenses, where the offenders' employment might have been involved in the offense. Even here, however, 27% were unemployed.

Prior record. Thirty-two percent of convicted offenders had been convicted of at least one prior State or Federal felony offense. Another 18% had been convicted of misdemeanors only. For half of the offenders, the present conviction was the first.

Offenders convicted of violent offenses had more serious criminal records than other offenders: 53% had previously been convicted of at least one felony offense. Fraudulent property and regulatory offenders had the least serious records: most (63% and 64%, respectively) were first offenders.

Drug use. Twenty-four percent of convicted offenders had known histories of drug abuse. The history of drug abuse varied by offense category: Offenders convicted of violent or drug offenses were more likely to have drug histories (41% and 34%, respectively) than those charged with regulatory offenses (12%), fraudulent property crimes (13%), or non-regulatory public-order offenses (19%).

Matters concluded by U.S. Magistrates (table 3.4)

In addition to cases terminated in district courts, another 13,233 persons were brought before U.S. Magistrates in 1989 (table 3.4). The largest group of these matters (38%) involved immigration law violations. Another 12% were accused of escape.

Overall, 63% of these persons were convicted, about the same as in 1988. The conviction rate in matters disposed by U.S. Magistrates was lower than the average rate of conviction for defendants in cases terminated by the district courts (81%). However, 95% of defendants who appeared before a U.S. Magistrate charged with immigration offenses were convicted. Persons who appeared before U.S. Magistrates charged with violent offenses or drug offenses were acquitted over 70% of the time.

This compendium's tabulations of characteristics of convicted offenders are not controlled for other related characteristics.

Chapter 4

Sentencing

Depending on the offense, convicted offenders may be sentenced to incarceration, probation, a fine, or a combination of sanctions such as a split or mixed sentence (imprisonment as well as a period of supervised release).¹ The court's sentencing decision is influenced by a number of factors including statutory penalties for the conviction offense, the seriousness of the offender's conduct in the offense, the offender's prior record, the judge's assessment of an offender's prospects for rehabilitation, and any plea-bargaining agreements that may have been made.

Procedures for sentencing and paroling offenders convicted of violating a Federal law were changed significantly by the Sentencing Reform Act²—applicable to offenses committed after November 1, 1987. For such cases, sentencing guidelines prescribe ranges of recommended sentences for each combination of offense and offender characteristics, and imprisonment sentences imposed under the guidelines are served in full, except for time off for good behavior earned by prisoners. Prisoners sentenced under the guidelines are not eligible for release by the U.S. Parole Commission prior to the expiration of their sentences.

Approximately half (51%) of offenders convicted in 1989 were subject to the guidelines, while the remaining half were convicted of offenses committed prior to the effective date of the guidelines. Therefore, the statistics in this chapter describe a year in which there was a transition between two systems of sentencing. Separate statistics, calculated only for those cases that were sentenced under the guidelines during 1989, are included in a BJS special report, Federal Sen- tencing in Transition: Sentencing and Time Served in Prison, 1986-1990.

Plea bargaining may reduce the offender's sentence by reducing the seriousness of the offense charged, reducing the number of counts in the indictment against the defendant, or negotiating a lesser sentence for a given charge. Except where otherwise noted, tables in this chapter are based on the most serious offense of conviction and are not directly comparable with tables in earlier chapters that are based on most serious offense investigated or most serious offense charged.

Offenders convicted and sentences imposed (tables 4.1, 4.2)

Eighty-one percent of all offenders in cases terminated in 1989 were convicted (see Chapter 3). Of these, 48% were sentenced to incarceration only,³ 32% were sentenced to probation only, 10% were sentenced to both incarceration and probation, and 9% were fined (table 4.1). (In most tables, the convicted offenders who received split or mixed sentences are included in both the probation and the incarceration data.)

Overall, 58% of convicted offenders were sentenced to incarceration, either alone or accompanied by probation or a fine. Offenders convicted of violent offenses—especially murder, robbery and kidnapping—were most likely to be incarcerated (87%). Drug traffickers were also frequently sentenced to prison (92%). Prison sentences were frequently imposed on offenders convicted of escape (90%), burglary (82%), racketeering or extortion (78%), or weapons offenses (77%).

Offenders convicted of public-order charges were least likely to be incarcerated (averaging 41%). If traffic offenses are excluded, however, 60% of the remaining offenders convicted of public-order offenses were incarcerated.

Offenders convicted of property offenses (65%) and regulatory offenses (59%) were most likely to be sentenced to some term of probation, either alone or as part of a sentence that included incarceration. Sentences combining probation with a term of incarceration were frequently used with white collar and similar crimes such as violations of motor carrier regulations, and tax offenses (over 20% of convicted offenders). These sentences were also frequently used to punish offenders convicted of burglary and transportation of stolen property.

Sixty-one percent of all offenders convicted of traffic offenses were sentenced only to pay fines, as were 25% or more of offenders convicted of agriculture, antitrust, migratory birds, or mail or transport of obscene material. Except for 17 persons convicted of assault and three persons convicted of "other" (possibly nonviolent) sex offenses, fines were never the sole punishment for violent offenses (table 4.2). Only 11 of the 14,023 convicted drug traffickers received no punishment other than a fine.

Relationship between sentence and method of case disposition (table 4.3)

Likelihood of incarceration. Defendants who were convicted at trial received more severe sentences than defendants who pleaded guilty. Overall, 79% of offenders convicted at trial were incarcerated (with a prison sentence alone or a sentence that included probation as well as prison), compared to 55% of offenders convicted by plea. Drug offenders who pleaded guilty were about eight times as likely to avoid incarceration as those convicted at trial. Offenders convicted of fraudulent property offenses were more than twice as likely to avoid incarceration as those convicted at trial.

Length of sentence. Offenders sentenced to incarceration as a result of guilty plea received average sentences 62% shorter than offenders convicted at trial. Offenders convicted at trial received sentences averaging 9.3 years; the average sentence for offenders convicted by plea was 3.5 years.

Characteristics of offenders sentenced to incarceration (table 4.4)

The majority of offenders sentenced to incarceration in 1989 were white (71%) and male (83%). The data indicate that the percentage sentenced to incarceration was not uniform across all categories of age, race, sex, and ethnicity. However, no conclusions can be drawn from the data about the influence of these characteristics on sentencing. Such an assessment would require detailed information for each category showing the presence or absence of factors that are legally intended to affect sentencing, such as weapon use, victim injury, dollar loss, etc.

Women were substantially less likely to be confined than men who were convicted of similar offenses. In all, 72% of men and 42% of women were sentenced to be incarcerated. The offenders' race was not systematically related to incarceration outcomes. Black offenders convicted of violent offenses or drug offenses were slightly more likely to be incarcerated than white offenders in the same categories, while white property offenders and regulatory offenders had a higher incarceration rate than black offenders convicted of offenses in the same category. Hispanic offenders convicted of public-order violations were more likely to be incarcerated than were non-Hispanic offenders with the same category of convictions.

Offenders with a history of either drug abuse or convictions of prior offenses were substantially more likely to be sentenced to incarceration than were drug-free or first offenders. A sentence of incarceration was also more likely to be given to offenders who were unemployed at the time of arrest.

Except for public-order offenders, the few Federal offenders under the age of 21 were less likely to be incarcerated than older persons convicted of similar offenses.

Average prison sentence length (tables 4.2, 4.3 and 4.5)

The average imposed prison sentence term for all offenders convicted in 1989 was 54 months. Offenders convicted of violent crimes received the longest prison sentences (90 months average sentence for all violent offenses). Sentences for drug offenders were also much longer than average (74 months). For most other types of offenses, the average prison sentences were between 24 and 30 months. Notable exceptions were burglary (42 months), transportation of stolen property (33 months), weapons offenses (47 months) and racketeering or extortion (57 months). Short periods of incarceration were imposed for gambling—(12 months), drug possession—(8 months), some traffic offenses (3 months), some regulatory offenses (agriculture—8 months; food and drug—11 months), and immigration offenses (9 months).

Relationship of prison term to offender characteristics (table 4.5)

For most offenses, younger persons were sentenced to shorter terms than older offenders. Similarly, women received sentences ranging from 26% to 42% shorter than those imposed on men incarcerated for similar offense types.

The relationship of sentence length to drug abuse was more complex. On average, offenders with a history of drug abuse received slightly longer sentences (55 months) than those with no known drug involvement convicted of similar offenses (52 months). The average sentence imposed on violent offenders with drug histories was 28% longer than that for violent offenders with no known drug abuse. On the other hand, for offenders convicted of a drug offense, those known to have previously been users themselves were given sentences averaging 13% shorter than those imposed on offenders who did not use drugs.

Convicted offenders with a prior felony conviction received sentences averaging 70% longer than first offenders convicted of similar offenses.

Chapter 5

Corrections

Although the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984 applies to offenses committed on or after November 1, 1987, most of the persons described in this chapter were serving sentences imposed under prior law, which made them eligible for release to parole supervision after completing a third or less of their prison terms. Offenders who remained in prison until their mandatory release date were possibly subject to a period of post-release community supervision.

In general, offenders released in 1989 under probation or parole supervision were required to report for further counseling sessions, remain in a specified area, receive drug or alcohol treatment, or fulfill other conditions determined by the judge or supervision agency. The violation of these special conditions or the commission of a new offense could result in reincarceration or in the imposition of additional restrictions.

The rate at which offenders successfully complete (or violate) a period of parole or probation supervision depends upon the length of the supervision term (which may reflect characteristics of the offense or offender), the stringency of supervision conditions, and the strictness of supervisory review. Statistics on violation rates, therefore, reflect a combination of the behavior of the offender, the supervision system, and the time under supervision.

Probation outcomes (tables 5.1 and 5.2)

In 1989 24,683 offenders completed a sentence to probation (table 5.1). Seventy-eight percent of them completed the full term of supervision with no violation; 6% had supervision revoked for a new crime and 16% for a technical violation.

Violations by offense. Probation sentences were frequently imposed on certain types of white collar offenders (see Chapter 4). Violation rates for several of these offenses were lower than the average for all probationers: embezzlement (11% technical, 4% new crimes); fraud (13% and 5%, respectively), and tax law violations (7% and 2%). Fewer than 3% of regulatory offenders violated their probation by committing a new crime. Probationers convicted of racketeering or extortion were also less likely than average to have their probation revoked.

Over 13% of weapons offenders, in contrast, committed a new crime while on probation. The rate of technical violations was high among offenders who had been convicted of robbery (33%), forgery (29%), larceny (21%), or drug possession (21%).

Offender characteristics. Only 4% of first offenders had probation revoked for committing a new offense (table 5.2), compared to 15% of those who had previously served prison terms of a year or more and 13% of those with shorter adult incarcerations. Among offenders whose drug history is known, drug abusers were three times as likely to have probation revoked for a technical violation as offenders believed not to be drug abusers. In many of these cases, the violation involved a condition requiring some form of drug treatment or testing.

Parole outcomes (tables 5.3 and 5.4)

A total of 10,828 offenders who had been released on parole completed their parole supervision in 1989 (table 5.3). Sixteen percent of them had their parole revoked for a new crime. Another 27% had parole revoked for a technical violation. The technical violation rate in 1989 was the highest since this publication series began in 1984. In previous years, technical violation rates ranged from 19% to 23% of parolees.

The violation rate for parolees in each major offense category was substantially higher than the corresponding rate for offenders released on probation. The higher parole violation rate may reflect the fact that parolees were initially sentenced to prison—a determination that probably reflected the seriousness of the offenses and the offenders' prior record (see Chapter 4).

Violations by offense. Offenders convicted of burglary or violent offenses were least likely to complete parole with no violation (30% for burglary and 33% for violent offenses) and most likely to have parole revoked for a new crime (30% and 29%, respectively) or a technical violation (40 and 38%, respectively).

Persons convicted of drug crimes had lower-than-average rates of parole violations—37% overall, 12% for new crimes, and 25% for technical violations.

Offender characteristics. In contrast to persons convicted of drug offenses who are not necessarily drug abusers, 61% of offenders known to have a history of drug abuse violated parole terms (table 5.4), compared to 29% of parolees with no known drug use. However, about 72% of the violations by drug users were technical violations of release conditions rather than new offenses. Because drug testing and treatment are often included in the parole conditions of known drug users, it may be that many of these violations were drug related. However, parolees with drug histories also appear more likely to have parole revoked for committing new crimes than other parolees (17% vs. 14%, respectively).

The rate of parole revocations also varied according to the offenders' prior criminal records. Twenty-two percent of offenders with no prior convictions had parole revoked, compared to about 57% of offenders with juvenile delinquency records and 64% of those with records of a prior conviction with more than a 1-year sentence.

More specifically, 7% of parolees with no prior recorded sentences had parole revoked for committing a new crime, compared to 21% of the parolees with prior juvenile incarceration and 24% of parolees with a prior adult incarceration.

Comparison of parole and probation populations (tables 5.2 and 5.4)

The violation rate for every major group of parolees is substantially higher than the corresponding rate for offenders sentenced to probation. This reflects substantial differences between the types of offenders in the two populations.

Overall, 66% of offenders completing terms of probation were identified as first offenders; only 32% of parolees showed no previous convictions. Similarly, 18% of offenders completing probation were identified as drug abusers; 42% of parolees terminating supervision in the same year were identified as drug abusers. These findings reflect the fact that parolees, on the basis of their prior record or offense characteristics, were initially found unsuitable for probation and sentenced to prison (see Chapter 4).

Violation rate (table 5.5)

The likelihood that an offender will be cited for a violation during the first year of supervision varies according to the type of release (table 5.5). Seventeen percent of persons on mandatory release (for example, prisoners not previously found qualified for parole release) violated terms during the first year; this compared to 14% of parolees and 10% of probationers. Among offenders on mandatory release, 5% had violations for major offenses during the 1-year period, compared to 2% of probationers. For every class of offender, technical violations outnumbered new crimes by margins ranging from 113% (for offenders supervised after mandatory release) to 225% (for offenders serving sentences of probation imposed by a U.S. Magistrate).

Because the likelihood of a violation increases as the period of supervision increases, the annual violation rate, which more clearly reflects differences among offender groups, is generally lower than the overall violation rate for similar groups during the total period of supervision.

Time served in prison (tables 5.6 and 5.7)

In 1989, a total of 23,748 prisoners were released for the first time from the custody of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons after serving sentences imposed by U.S. district courts for violations of the U.S. Code (table 5.6).¹ Most of them had been sentenced to prison for offenses committed prior to the effective date of sentencing guidelines, but some prisoners released in 1989 had been sentenced under the guidelines.

Including credits for time spent in jail prior to final disposition, inmates first released in 1989 served an average of 19 months—86% of the sentence imposed for the most serious offense—in confinement. The average length of time served was the same as in 1988, but the percentage of imposed sentence increased (from 80% in 1988), reflecting the influence of sentencing guidelines.

Violent offenders served terms three times as long as the average (4.4 years), while terms for public-order offenders were less than half the average (9 months). Because more provisions for early release, such as parole and time credited for good behavior, are available to inmates serving longer sentences, violent offenders serve an average of 67% of their sentences, while inmates convicted of public-order offenses serve 100% of their sentences.

Prisoners convicted of drug trafficking offenses (including sales, importation, and manufacture) served an average of nearly two years and 5 months in 1989, 11% longer than the average time served by the cohort of similar offenders released in 1988.

Prisoners released in 1989 who were sentenced to five-year terms for their most serious offense actually served an average of two years and eleven months (table 5.7). Those with ten-year terms actually served 4 years and 8 months, and those sentenced to twenty years actually served less than eight years in prison.

At each level of imposed sentences over 1 year, violent offenders remained in prison for a somewhat longer time than average, ranging from 3 months longer for 2-year sentences to 11 months longer for 10-year sentences.

Prisoner movements (table 5.8)

In 1989 the U.S. Bureau of Prisons received 29,012 prisoners directly from sentences imposed by U.S. district courts. Another 9,448 persons were committed to prison for having violated conditional release, as a result of sentences by military or other courts, or for treatment or examination. Thirty-nine percent of the district court commitments were for drug trafficking, and another 37% were for offenses classified as public-order offenses. Most of the imprisoned public-order offenders were convicted of violations of immigration laws.

In all, commitments in 1989 exceeded releases by 5,854, with the result that the Federal prisoner population increased by more than 110 prisoners per week. Three-quarters of the net increase was due to drug traffickers. Other categories of offenders contributing substantially to the increase in prison population included those convicted of weapons offenses, immigration, fraud, and racketeering or extortion.

¹ U.S. Bureau of Prisons facilities hold many other kinds of inmates, such as material witnesses, probation and parole violators, prisoners held for other jurisdictions, and offenders convicted of violating the D.C. Code or sentenced by D.C. Superior Court or the courts martial. All these inmates are excluded from this discussion.

[REDACTED]

Methodology

The source of data for all tables in this compendium is the BJS Federal justice database maintained by Abt Associates Inc. The database is presently constructed from source files provided by the Executive Office for U.S. Attorneys, the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, the Pretrial Services Agency (PSA), and the U.S. Bureau of Prisons. Federal law prohibits the use of these files for any purposes other than research or statistics.

Records in the Federal justice database are matched according to a statistically weighted combination of names, other personal identifiers, dates of court appearances, types of offenses, and other relevant information contained in the files. Using the matched data files, it is possible to combine information about all stages of the processing of a criminal matter or case, from the prosecutor's decision of whether to file a criminal case, through adjudication, and, if the defendant is convicted, through prison and/or supervised release.

The unit of analysis in the tables in Chapters 1 to 4 is a combination of a person (or corporation) and a matter or case. For example, if a single person is involved in three different criminal cases during the time period specified in the table, he or she is counted three times in the tabulation. Similarly, if a single criminal case involves a corporate defendant and four individual defendants, it counts five times in the tabulation. In Chapter 5, the unit of analysis for supervised release or incarceration is a person. For example, a person who is committed to the custody of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons concurrently upon conviction on two cases in the indicated time period is counted as one admission to prison in the tabulation.

Wherever possible, matters or cases have been selected according to some event which occurred during calendar year 1989 (January 1, 1989 through December 31, 1989). Some data files provided by source agencies are organized according to different time frames (fiscal years or statistical years); these have been combined and extracted into calendar years for purposes of this compendium. Further, files which are organized by their source agencies according to calendar years nonetheless include some pertinent records in later years' files. For example, tabulations of cases terminated during calendar year 1989 in this compendium have been assembled from source files containing records of 1989 terminations which were entered into the data system during 1989 or 1990. Unless otherwise noted, data tables describe the calendar year 1989.

The availability of particular items of information is affected by the data source. Data on prosecutors' decisions prior to court filing are provided for cases investigated by U.S. Attorneys, but not for those handled by the Criminal Division of the U.S. Department of Justice. Criminal Division cases enter the data base once they are filed in U.S. district court, however. Many items of social and demographic information come from presentence investigation records or supervision records, and are available only for arrested defendants who were convicted and/or began serving a sentence involving supervised release. (This particularly affects sex, race, ethnicity, education, and occupational information.)

The offense classification procedure used in this compendium is based on the classification system followed by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts. Specific offenses in the Administrative Office classification are combined to form the BJS categories shown in the compendium tables.* For data sources that include United States Code citations, but do not include the Administrative Office offense classifications, United States Code titles and sections are translated into the Administrative Office classification system and then aggregated into the offense categories used in the tables. Offense categories for prisoners in Chapter 5 are based on combinations of offense designations used by the Bureau of Prisons. They are similar to the categories in other chapters and other tables in Chapter 5, but may not be directly comparable.

Where more than one offense is charged or adjudicated, the most serious offense (the one that may or did result in the most severe sentence) is used in classification. Prisoners are classified according to the offense which actually bears the longest incarceration sentence. The offense description may change as the criminal justice process proceeds. Tables indicate whether investigated, charged or adjudicated offenses are used.

Tables concerning prisoners in Chapter 5 distinguish between prisoners committed by U.S. district courts for violations of the U.S. Code and other prisoners. Prisoners released after commitment from U.S. district court are called "first releases." The other admissions and releases include offenders who are returning to prison after their first release, such as probation and parole violators, offenders convicted in other courts, such as military or District of Columbia courts, and persons admitted to prison as material witnesses or for purposes of treatment, examination, or transfer to another authority. Unlike BJS publications concerning State prisoners, which exclude prisoners serving sentences under one year, compendium tables include Federal prisoners who received sentences of any length.

Time served in prison is the number of months from the prisoner's arrival into custody of the Bureau of Prisons until first release from prison, plus any jail time served and credited. The calculation is the same as that currently used by the Bureau of Prisons. Because other publications may include different groups of prisoners, calculate time served differently, or use a different offense classification, compendium tables may differ from estimates of time served in previous publications by the Bureau of Prisons or in publications based on other data sources.

The tables in the compendium are constructed to permit the user to make valid comparisons of numbers within each table and to compare percentage rates across tables. The total numbers of subjects in compendium tables that are based on records linked between two files are generally less than the total number of records either source file. Accordingly, comparisons of absolute numbers across two or more tables, or between tables in this volume and other data sources, are not necessarily valid.

Data notes

- 1) Figure 2 refers to 104,248 suspects investigated by U.S. Attorneys in matters terminated in 1989 (table 1.2). Sixty-eight percent of these suspects were prosecuted either in U.S. district court ($58,160 = 56\%$) or before a U.S. Magistrate ($13,233 = 13\%$). Since conviction data refer to a different cohort of defendants (those whose cases were terminated), and are classified by different offenses, statistical estimates are used for determining the length of the remaining horizontal bars in the figure. Judges convicted 81% of defendants in cases terminated in 1989 ($58,160 \times 81\% = 47,201$) (table 3.1). Magistrates convicted 63% of defendants ($13,233 \times 63\% = 8,354$) (table 3.4). The combined conviction rate is 53% of suspects investigated [$(47,201 + 8,354)/104,248$]]
- Of offenders convicted in U.S. district court, 58% were sentenced to incarceration ($47,201 \times 58\% = 27,609$) and 32% were sentenced to probation without incarceration (table 4.1) ($47,201 \times 32\% = 14,915$). These are, respectively, 26% ($27,609/104,248$) and 14% ($14,915/104,248$) of the suspects investigated. Sentences imposed after magistrate convictions are not included, but magistrates normally impose fines rather than sentences of probation or incarceration.
- 2) In Chapter 1 tables 1.1, 1.2, 1.3, 1.4, and 1.5 and in Chapter 3 table 3.4 were created from the docket and reporting data files of the Executive Office for U.S. Attorneys. Only records which showed a matter received in 1989 were selected for table 1.1. Only records which showed a matter terminated or filed as a case in 1989 were selected for tables 1.2-1.5 and 3.4. The statistics in these tables corre-
- spond to those published for 1989 in Federal Criminal Case Processing, 1980-89: With Preliminary Data for 1990.
- 3) Offenses in the docket and reporting data files are classified by the Title and Section of the United States Code for the most serious offense investigated. For tables in this compendium, these citations were translated into the corresponding 4-digit offense codes used by the Administrative Office of the United States Courts. These 4-digit codes were then aggregated into the categories shown in the tables. U.S. Code citations often do not permit detailed classification of drug offenses by type of criminal activity involved. A person charged with conspiracy is classified under the substantive offense alleged (for example, conspiracy to defraud is classified as a fraud) unless the type of conspiracy cannot be determined from the U.S. Code citation. Unclassified conspiracies are included among "conspiracy, aiding and abetting, traffic, and jurisdictional offenses" in tables 1.1, 1.2, and 1.4, and in the corresponding District tables.
- 4) In Chapter 2 all tables were created from the Pretrial Services Agency data files. However, approximately 15% of defendants who are scheduled for a Pretrial Services interview are not interviewed because they refuse the interview or for other reasons. Tables include these noninterviewed defendants in the totals and include detail for them if data are available from sources other than interviews.
- 5) In Chapter 2 tables 2.1, 2.2, 2.3, and 2.6 were created from the Pretrial Services Agency data files.
- Only records scheduled for a pretrial interview in 1989 were selected. In total, 41,764 defendants were scheduled for interview, but data are incomplete for some defendants.
- 6) Tables 2.4 and 2.5 in Chapter 2 were created from the Pretrial Services Agency data files. Data describe defendants whose pretrial services were terminated in 1989.
- 7) Tables 3.1 and 3.2 in Chapter 3 and tables 4.1, 4.2, and 4.3 in Chapter 4 were derived from the Administrative Office master data files. Only records with cases terminated in 1989 were selected.
- 8) Table 3.3 in Chapter 3 and table 4.4 in Chapter 4 were created by matching the Administrative Office master data files with the Pretrial Services Agency data files and probation and parole data files. Records were included in the table if the relevant information was available from any source. Some items are available only from one of the files. The number of records for these items is lower than those for items which might have come from two or three files. Moreover, many records omit data on certain items, such as ethnicity. Tables indicate the number of records on which relevant data were available.
- 9) In Chapter 5 tables 5.1-5.4 were created from the probation and parole data files. Only records with supervision terminated in 1989 were selected.
- 10) In Chapter 5, table 5.5 was created from the probation and parole data files. Records with supervision opened or reinstated in 1989 and having twelve or more months of supervision were selected.

- 11) In Chapter 5 tables 5.6, 5.7, and 5.8, prisoners and the lengths of their sentences are classified according to the offense associated with the longest single sentence actually imposed. (Classifications in other tables are based on the longest potential sentence allowed by law.) Prisoners serving consecutive sentences may have total imposed sentences exceeding the longest single sentence length. Accordingly, the time actually served can exceed the longest single imposed sentence.

Offense categories in tables 5.6, 5.7, and 5.8 are based on combinations of offense designations used by the Bureau of Prisons. They are similar to the categories in other tables in this compendium, but may not be directly comparable. Offenses for some prisoners admitted or released could not be classified; these offenders are included in the totals and are shown as "other prisoners" on the last line of tables. Time served is the number of months from the prisoner's arrival into custody of the Bureau of Prisons until first release from prison, plus any jail time served and credited. The calculation is the same as that currently used by the Bureau of Prisons. Other publications may include different groups of prisoners, calculate time served differently, or use a different offense classification, and consequently their estimates of time served may differ from those in tables 5.6 and 5.7.

- 12) Tables 5.6 and 5.7 include only prisoners committed by U.S. district courts for violations of the U.S. Code and received by the Bureau of Prisons in 1989. Other prisoners, such as probation and parole violators and prisoners committed by other courts such as courts martial or District of Columbia Superior court, are excluded in tables 5.6 and 5.7, as are other persons admitted to prison but not committed from a court. Unlike BJS publications concerning State prisoners, which exclude prisoners serving sentences under one year, tables 5.6, 5.7, and 5.8 include Federal prisoners who received sentences of any length.

- 13) In Chapter 5 table 5.8 shows all persons admitted to custody of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons in 1989 or released from custody in 1989. A single person may be counted in one or more columns of the table. The column heading "first release" refers to prisoners whose commitment to the U. S. Bureau of Prisons was by a U.S. district court and who were first released in 1989. Prisoners counted in this column are the same as the prisoners included in tables 5.6 and 5.7. Other columns in table 5.8 include prisoners who were committed by other courts, returned to prison for violation of the conditions of supervision, or were received for examination, treatment, or transfer to another jurisdiction. Over 15% of these prisoners cannot be classified into Federal offense categories. Offenders returning to prison for violation of the conditions of supervision, without a new court commitment, are classified according to the offense with the longest single sentence originally imposed at conviction.

Note: Data describe detention or release at any time following the initial bail hearing.

The sum of the defendants released and detained exceeds 100% because some defendants who were initially detained eventually raised bail or had the conditions of their bail changed by rehearing or appeal.

^aData describe defendants scheduled for pretrial interview in 1989. Total includes defendants for whom release status data were unavailable.

^bIncludes deposit bond, surety bond, and collateral bond.

^cInitially held two or more days.

Note: A defendant with more than one type of violation appears in more than one column. A defendant with more than one of the same type of violation appears only once in that column. Therefore the sum of individual types of violations may exceed the total. Not all violations resulted in revocation.

*Data describe defendants whose pretrial services were terminated in 1989. Excludes defendants who were released but whose records did not contain sufficient information to determine type of release or violation behavior.
